Good education is a process that brings desirable growth in the students. Besides academic growth, MAPS also encourages students to explore, analyze and lead. Upholding to this, a Science week was held in the school on 17.10.16 in which a plethora of various activities was conducted with the sole purpose to spread awareness among students about the ill effects of food wastage.

The highlights of the week were the 'Food Selfie Contest', where students attempted a Selfie sheet and clicked their selfie with different food groups along with its seller.

They also shared their experience of the place visited.

On the fourth day of the week, the students conducted a survey. Firstly they observed their class bin and then visited the canteen to collect information about the food items wasted and the reason for food wastage.

On the fifth day, students were assigned a home task in which they were asked to maintain a food diary to keep a record for the food items wasted at their home's kitchen and the reason for the same with their valuable suggestions. After the discussion of the sheets, 'No Food Wastage Day' was observed and students vowed not to waste food under any circumstances.

The last day ended with a Hurdle Race that left an inspiring message of never to stop their ways irrespective of all the hurdles they may face.

The teachers of class 2 contributed unreservedly and the outcome was appreciated by all. Students of other classes also thronged to contribute for the cause.
