“Reading is the key that opens doors to many good things in life.”

Learning to read is about listening and understanding as well as working out what is printed on the page. Through reading stories, children are exposed to a wide range of words. This helps them build their own vocabulary and improve their understanding when they read, which is vital as they start to read. To inculcate the habit of reading among young learners, an activity was conducted for the students of class I and II. Learners were given a pre-learning task to read a story in the classroom. They enjoyed reading and understood the story line.

Then they were asked to draw any picture or character or any scene of the story to depict the understanding of the story. The activity further took learners to art integration. This art integration helped them to improve their creativity and thinking capacity.

This activity provides a great platform to all the learners to showcase their creativity and simultaneously learn new things. This leads to cater cognitive, moral and aesthetic domains among learners. In nutshell, the activity was a great learning for all.
